NWHO aware to the people about importance of the marine ecosystem.

The most dangerous impact of deep-sea mining is biodiversity loss. The sensitivity of the marine system is disturbed by deep-sea mining.

The deep-sea mining creates light and noise pollution as well as vibrations in the deep sea beds that are calm. It causes disturbances in the marine ecosystem.

The deep-sea mining causes marine pollution due to the generation of sediments from sea beds that are dumped back into the sea.

Deep-sea mining can result in chemical pollution such as oil spills that have dangerous effects on marine biodiversity.

The coral reef ecosystem in the ocean is at high risk of disturbances due to deep-sea mining.
